

Benefits of becoming an Agroecology Europe member

Thank you for your interest in Agroecology Europe.

As you might already know, Agroecology Europe promotes agroecology practices and systems across Europe and intends to place agroecology high on the European agenda of sustainable development of farming and food systems.

The goals and objectives of the association are broken down into several activities, with possibilities for members to participate and become active. We foster interactions between actors in sciences, practices and social movements, by facilitating knowledge sharing and action to create an inclusive European community of professionals, practitioners, and societal stakeholders in agroecology.

Agroecology Europe is open to all individuals, groups and institutions interested in promoting agroecology, and aims to define its agenda through their participatory engagement. A website is being designed and will be launched soon.

We are always happy to share our member's stories from the field, articles, workshops and other content through our European network and on our website, social media and newsletter. We appreciate inputs and ideas from our members directly and do our best to share information or/and get active on topics our members find relevant.

Our members can vote and get elected in the General Assembly; initiate and participate in working groups (currently we have a working group on biodiversity, education and training, and the Youth Network working group); participate at reduced fees at the Agroecology Europe forum and workshops. Furthermore, thanks to the support of the European Commission, our members could be financially supported to organise webinars to promote their practices, share their stories and experiences and interact with a large network of experts, farmers and scientifics.

Becoming a member also includes access to the intranet which we are working on. The aim is to create access to resources such as a list of members, minutes and reports of meetings and working groups, conference proceedings, published papers (open access and not open access).

We remain at your disposal should you require any further information.

Warm regards,

Your Agroecology Europe Secretariat
